“ I worked with Cody, and discovered we had met years before through mutual friends. He always had a joke ready to go to brighten someone's day, as well as had your back against anything, no matter the cost. He was always reasy to include me in things at work, just to hang out. Countless times, he fed me without me asking. Not stuff from a store, but stuff he made himself. I'm not sure how it went down, but he would be at home and decide, I'm gonna make something for him, too. There's less joy, kindness, and love in the world without him.

“ I don't even know what to say or how to say how much this truly hurts . The best uncle a girl could've ever imagined the constant you are only 7 years old the picking me off my feet for big ole bear hug. what I would give to have that one last time. Living states away, he still made sure I knew he loved me. Whether that meant comments on my post about my grammar/ spelling or a simple text or ticktock about being an uncle. Forever in my heart and memories.
