“ I vividly recall the day my petite bubbly friend Kendra told us she was getting married to a tall elegant looking guy who had a pretty important job in finances at the hospital we were nurses at. I knew as little about David as I did about finance. However David quickly won me and all of Kendra's many friends over with his intelligence and wit and very apparent devotion to her. Through the years I have followed (from a distance unfortunately) their journey together- the inevitable hardships a job transfers moves, raising children, financial and health issues etc .It is clear to me from Kendra's account of of their last moments together in this life their devotion and love remained as strong as that memorable day long ago. Rest in peace David
