its been almost a year since you passed. the days get harder and harder as they go by. miss you more and more everyday. you were my bestfriend. the person i would turn to if i just wanted to talk for hours on end. had such an amazing time everytime i saw you. you always seemed to light up the room and create peace with your beautiful smile. i can't believe its almost been a full year. it hurts knowing i wont ever be able to hear your voice again other than replaying old videos. i still go to your facebook every once and a while hoping something new will pop up but it never does. i know it never will but part of me is waiting for myself to wake up from this nightmare. oh what i would do to hear your voice again or feel your warm hugs again. i wish i cherished our time together a little more than i did. because i wasnt expecting this. i'm so glad your not in pain anymore. it hurt me watching you go through test after test and medication after medication. i knew you hated it but you were soooo hopeful. and thats what i loved most about you. that you were so hopeful even though you were miserable. you went through so much and made it so far. you are a survivor and a hero. my hero. i love you and miss you like crazy aunt debbie. 🕊️

“ Debbie, I will always remember you for your loving heart and kind words. You will always remain a light in my life. A kind and gentle soul that was always willing to chat and listen. You will be missed dear cousin. Sour with the angels and tell my daughter I said hi.

“ What a wonderful sister in law you have been. You welcomed me into your wonderful family. I was slightly intimidated meeting all 3 of John's sisters, but you quickly made me feel like part of the family. I will always remember the laughter during our family game nights and how you seemed to know the answers to any and all questions. I always wanted to be on your team! Thanks for loving my children and being a wonderful aunt!! You will be truly missed! Love you always!! Marianne
