“ I took Hazel to a doctor appointment a while back, and while waiting for the doc to come in, I noticed she was turning pale and was acting different from when we first got there. When I asked her if she was okay, she said "No, I'm dizzy and am having trouble staying awake." Then she told me it was probably her blood sugar was dropping too low. I knew she had diabetes, but didn't know how bad it was. I didn't have anything on me to raise her blood sugar, so I went to the desk to ask if they had any candy or juice, anything to raise Hazel's blood sugar. They didn't, but somewhere found a strawberry cupcake! When I took it to her she inhaled it, then smiled her cute smile and said "Boy, that was good, and I feel better". It was just so cute and we talked about that many times, and she would smile at the thought of that strawberry cupcake!!
