“ Stephanie was my surgery preceptor after I transferred from the O B unit. She was the hardest working, kindest, and best nurse you could ever know. She had a very caring and loving spirit. She would always volunteer to stay over at work when she was needed even though she would be so tired from working the day before or maybe even got called in the night before on her on call day. We worked recovery room together a lot and had this little saying when we would hook a patient up to be recovered by saying " Hit it cricket" to start the blood pressure machine going. That came right out of the movie Mulan. Some of our co workers failed to see the humor in this so we had fun just saying it to aggravate sometimes., anyway she was a sweet and special lady. There will never be another Stephanie. Resting in the arms of God, and she so deserves it.
