“ I remember when I first moved to Wyandotte. I was a sophomore in high school, he was a freshman. I had moved there because I was bullied really bad at Miami high, and I had attempted suicide. I needed a fresh start.

My first day of school, I got on the bus in the morning. I was the first stop. When we got to Williams stop, he got on, and sat a seat behind me. He looked at me, a be kid with headphones blaring some rock song, and he waved. He waved and he smiled at me.

That smile we contagious.

I took out my headphones and smiled at him. He moved to sit next to me, and he said, "I've never seen you before, you're new right?" We talked for a bit, and at the end of our conversation he told me, "I get this feeling that you're a really special person."

He was my first friend there and he helped me get through a really tough time.

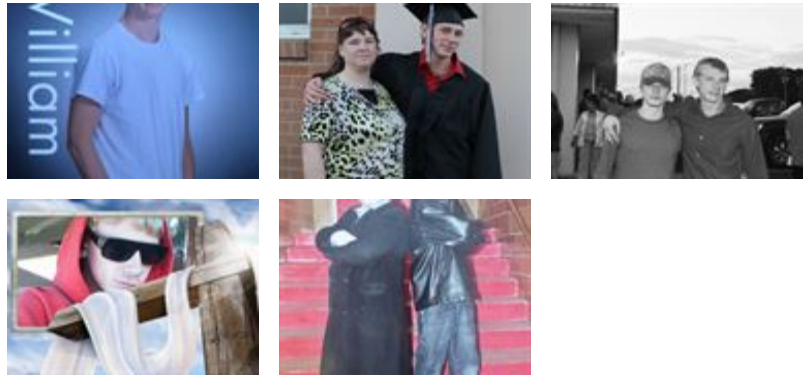

I'll never forget how special this young man was, and I swear to never let his memory be forgotten in my life.

R.I.P William.
